

COVID-19 – The Recovery

Free Virtual Learning Session
on 3 Apr 2020 at 10am

The Covid-19 epidemic has not only damaged lives. It has also seriously affected businesses and people's livelihood. If there was ever a time for resilience and creativity it is now. It's imperative not to give up, but instead think of innovative responses to this massive disruption.

Virtual Learning

Here is the MDS response – “going virtual” as an alternative way of keeping learning alive. We have crafted some great, new programmes and put them into a collection called the “Future Work Series”. And we have condensed these one day interactive face-to-face workshops into a half day session of virtual interaction. It works very well with zoom or similar. The huge advantages are:

- People isolated at home are suddenly connected
- Distance is no problem – no one has to travel
- Gen Y, as well as busy senior executives are delighted
- Virtual sessions can be delivered at very short notice

Virtual sessions are 3.5 hour modules, followed by assignments or additional online material.

Future Work Series and Virtual Learning Session

The MDS Future Work Series is based on the recent research into skills for the future workforce from The University of Phoenix Research Institute. This is a crucially important debate for anyone involved in strategic HRM. Join us for a virtual learning experience (and practice with zoom) as you hear Robin present these research findings:

Benefits

It is time to re-energise your people and get them into a growth mindset. These virtual learning sessions produce future-ready people who are:

- confident
- empowered
- proactive
- engaged

These people will be your future talent – so take action now.

The MDS Advantage

This year MDS celebrates its 25th anniversary and is the biggest independent L and D supplier in Hong Kong. We bring you:

- Great facilitators
- Future-focused material
- Sophisticated design
